"Innovative although sincerely demented...A really strange, really engrossing good comic book"
-DAVE SIM, creator of CEREBUS

"Has the chance to be one of the truly remarkable comic series to be produced in the last ten years"
-OPTICAL SLOTH

"Filled with a bit of mystery, a little noir, cracks on religious fervor, the promise of hope, and even a little baseball, this story features a sampling of everything in order to create a whole that both makes perfect sense and is totally screwed up all at the same time. In short, Rafer Roberts knows how to tell good comics."
-PANEL PATTERN

"I have to admit I still don't get it...and what I do get disgusts me".
-JOHANNA DRAPER CARLSON, Comics Worth Reading

Chester Carter has issues. He was abandoned as a baby, raised in a haunted psychiatric hospital, has a magical dinosaur-riding cowboy living inside of his head, and just might be the most important person who has ever lived. Now he sits in a nameless airport bar telling his life story to a bunch of people who couldn't care less. These are the stories about Chester Carter's reality, and the people (including a washed-up celebrity, a foul-mouthed four-eyed demon monkey, a pair of zombie cops, cannibal farmers, religious zealots, an assassin with a heart of gold, and an airline baggage handler) who have to live in it...
